"A Marvel of Taste and Skill:

Carved Pipes of the American Civil War"

These small wood and stone tobacco pipes made by both sides during the Civil War were used to kill time, earn money, given as gifts, honor the fallen and sent home to families. They reflect the patience, skills, and endurance of those whose lives were forever changed by the Civil War

Mountain laurel pipe bowl carved in 1861 by an unknown soldier of the Ohio Volunteer Infantry in what is now West Virginia (Cowan's Auctions)

Lea is passionate about remembering people of the past through the material objects they made, used, and preserved. She has served as the Curator of the Museum of Early Southern Decorative Arts in Winston-Salem, NC since 2022. Previously, she was Curator of Collections for Preservation Virginia's five statewide historic sites: Bacon's Castle, Cape Henry Lighthouse, John Marshall House, Patrick Henry's Scotchtown, and Smith's Fort. Lea has also held positions at The Winterthur Museum, The Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, and the Cincinnati Art Museum. She earned her Bachelor's degree in History from the University of Virginia and Master's from the University of Delaware's Winterthur Program in American Material Culture.
